Easy reading - 1903 article about Montgomery's history, part 2

An article written Wednesday, September 30, 1903 Times and News-Letter newspaper

The Hampden County Town of Greater Altitude than Magnitude, Built on the Sky Line, where Cool Breezes Blow. An Ideal Summer Home. A Community of Farmers, and a Town with a Good Record.

Formerly there existed here two stores, a large tavern, blacksmith shop, etc. all of which contributed to the activity of the place. Of the two churches which succeeded the old original structure but one, the Congregationalist, is now used for purposes of worship, the Methodist Church on the opposite side of the street being used as a place of entertainment.

The blacksmith shop has been discontinued, and the building which served as a tavern is now owned and occupied by Mr. David Allyn, one of the town's leading and substantial citizens, who is town treasurer and carries on a varied and successful business being engaged in butchering, farming, etc. The large house owned and occupied by Mr. Allyn, and which served in the old days as a tavern, stands well up from the main road, which is the main avenue of travel through the town to the west. Formerly, before the days of railroading, the wagoners who drove across country with their loads of supplied, and the traveling public generally, stopped here for refreshment and lodging. Liquor was sold here, and the present kitchen was once the bar room where good cheer abounded and where cooling drinks could be obtained in summer and warming drinks in winter.

The old sign, bearing the legend, "Chapman's Inn", which formerly swung in front of the house, by the roadside, is still preserved on the premises, as are also many other relics of former days, connected with the place. A small ell or annex to the house, painted red, was the quarters occupied as a general store, wherein was kept the varied stock of merchandise there being a department for dry goods, another for groceries and still another for the dispensing of liquors. Although it is many years since the place was abandoned as a store, and it having since then served as a tool house and store room, its appearance inside and out has undergone little change, so far as construction is concerned. The original heavy-built counter is still in its place, the shelves whereon rested the stock of calicoes, notions and other merchandise, still remain as they were put up, and certainly in a most substantial manner. Even the ancient wooden twine reel remains suspended near the ceiling where it did duty for so long a time. The two 24-pained windows are guarded on the outside by the original wooden shutters, held securely by the diagonal bars of wrought iron which were released by a latch on the inside, certainly a most effective combination, guarding against intrusion.

Mr. Allyn recalls some of the incidents of the old store in his boyhood days, telling of the wrestling matches indulged in by the "boys", most of whom have passed away, and a few of whom still remain on their native hills. Here it was, following the custom of country towns, that the men gathered to talk through the evening and here in the exciting times that marked the opening and progress of the Civil War, that the great topic of the hour was discussed and the enthusiasm worked up which led to the enlistment of patriots who lent their strength to the Union arms.

The inhabitants of Montgomery are and always have been a God fearing and zealous Christian people, and town's church history contains much of interest. The town having been incorporated November 28, 1780, on the 30th day of January 1797, a Congregational church, numbering but five male members, was formed. Rev. Seth Noble, son of Thomas Noble of Westfield, was the first pastor, being installed Nov. 4, 1801, and dismissed Sept. 16, 1806. Mr. Noble had a fondness for the tune "Bangor", and was the cause of that name being given to that city in Maine. He was preaching at that point when the town was incorporated, and went to Boston in behalf of the people, to present their petition for incorporation. The petitioners wished the name to be "Sunfield", but he struck out the word and inserted Bangor, and Bangor it remains. He died in Ohio in 1807.

Methodism gained a foothold in the town about 1825, and increased so rapidly that in course of the next twenty years, a house of worship was erected at the center. The Second Adventists also established a society of their church in Montgomery, occupying the Congregational house of worship at the center

The Methodist society having decreased in numbers, the church was at last abandoned for purposes of worship, and for years stood unused and by degrees going into decay because of a leaky roof and want of repairs, seeing which, the more active of the townspeople set about to get the proper authority, and proceeded to put the building in better condition, it now being used as a public hall for entertainments, and especially as headquarters for the Grange, a very active organization. This old church whose erection is recalled by the older men and women of the town, where the slips were sold to raise money to defray the expenses of building, was dismantled on the inside. The pews were removed, the altar taken away, and the high pulpit, wherein many an earnest disciple had spoken the Word, was also cast out, and in its place a platform or stage erected, which now serves for the entertainments.

Having secured from Mr. Allyn, custodian of the key, the loan of that instrument, with an expression of our good intentions, we may enter the church, a typical one of the old New England style of meeting-house architecture. We mount the stone slab that serves as a step, cross the wellworn threshold, and find ourselves in the narrow vestibule, whose plastered walls are now pencilled with many names. One finds the equipment and paraphernalia of a public hall. The high windows on both sides admit ample light, and we can see that the heating of the church was by the primitive box-stove method. The taste, which we might call barbarous, which prompted the removal of the pulpit, happily did not extend to the singers' gallery. This has been preserved intact, and here we have a feature of the old church architecture, worth of more than a passing glance. This singers' gallery is opposite the pulpit end of the church, and is built against the east wall. It consists of three tiers of benches whereon the choir were seated, and in front of which are resting places for the hymn books of the singers Two flights of steps, boxed in, lead to the tiers above, and there are accommodations there for about twenty people. Looking at this quaint elevated structure, one cannot but reflect on the history of the place, and the familiar lines of B.F. Taylor are recalled wherein he speaks so feelingly of the "Old Church".

SEPTEMBER RECIPE

Get your soil into shape for next year's growth

Things to do in September: Move houseplants back indoors when nighttime temperatures begin to approach the upper 40's. Have vour garden & lawn soil tested this month to see if lime is needed. Go to soiltest.umass.edu for complete information on taking & sending a sample to the UMass Soil testing lab.

GardenNews by Chris Brown

If needed, limestone is best applied in fall.

Keep weeding! Ignoring weeds won't make them go away. Most weed plants are now setting seed and letting one plant go can mean thousands more in your future.

Sow several varieties of leaf lettuce early this month. Sow seeds of beets & carrots as well. Use hoops with row covers to extend your season well into the fall.

Peonies can be transplanted this month, if they are not doing well at their present place in your garden. Peonies prefer full sun as well as drained soil and a pH close to neutral. Peony clumps can survive 50 to 100 years, so prepare the soil well by adding good compost before planting.

COLD TOMATOES ON HOT SPAGHETTI

Recipe for September by Chris Brown. This recipe is possibly a repeat but it bears 'doing again", especially if you are inundated with fresh tomatoes from your garden.

6 ripe tomatoes, chopped 2 cloves garlic, peeled, sliced in half ½ cup olive oil1 cup fresh basil, chopped 1 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. hot pepper flakes

Mix all the above ingredients. Put in refrigerator to get chilled. Serve over hot pasta with parmesan cheese. Delicious!

Outside the bird feeder with Lori Conley EXACTLY WHEN TO STOP FEEDING HUMMINGBIRDS

The precise dates to take down hummingbird feeders not only vary from region to region but can vary from yard to yard as individual birds take advantage of favored food sources. Ideally, feeders should be kept clean, filled, and available to birds for at least a week or two after the last hummingbird has been seen visiting. At the same time, birders must keep in mind that migrating hummingbirds or different hummingbird species may still be arriving as they pass through the area. When no birds have been sighted after at least seven to 10 days, it is safe to remove the feeders and store them until next spring.

Minor Recycling Changes Take Effect July 1

estern Mass residents may have heard that changes to household recycling rules are pending.

Please be assured that changes for the average household will be minor.

First, some background. The Springfield Materials Recycling Facility (MRF) accepts, sorts, bales, and sells recyclable material from 73 member communities in western Mass. The MRF is the only recycling facility in Massachusetts that is owned by the Commonwealth. It is operated by a private operator, and a 15 member advisory board discusses and reviews its operations, provides recycling education (such as this guide) to the public, and acts as a liaison between member communities, the MRF operator and Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

A new contract with the private operator, Waste Management Recycles America, will go into effect on July 1, 2020. The new contract adds two items to list of acceptable material and removes two items. Details are provided below.

Shredded paper and aerosol cans will no longer be accepted

As of July 1, 2020, shredded paper will no longer be acceptable in western Massachusetts' household/municipal paper recycling program. Going forward, the best way to get your confidential documents recycled is to bring them to area businesses (e.g. copy shops, office supply, shipping stores, and local banks) for secure shredding. Many local banks sponsor free spring and fall shredding events. The material generated from commercial shredding operations is taken directly to local paper mills, avoiding the scattering and contamination that ensues at a household recycling facility. If you are not able to bring your paper to a business or public event for shredding, please dispose of shredded paper as trash.

On July 1st, 2020, aerosol cans will no longer be accepted in municipal recycling. Until then, recycle only EMPTY aerosol cans that contained non-hazardous materials, such as health & beauty products (sun block, first aid spray, hair products, deodorant, & shaving cream); food products (cooking oil, whipped cream, frosting) and laundry products (starch, anti-static products & air fresheners). To prevent a fire hazard, cans must be completely empty (no air or noise from the nozzle when pressed). Do not puncture, pierce, flatten, or remove nozzles prior to recycling.

Clear plastic cups and egg cartons will be considered acceptable

As of July 1, 2020, crystal clear plastic cups (printed OK) will be considered acceptable in municipal recycling. Remove lids and straws and place them in a trash receptacle.

Other plastic cups, such as polystyrene (#6 plastic), colored "keg" cups, and opaque (cloudy) plastic cups, are not acceptable for recycling and must go in the trash. If a clear cup is labeled "compostable," it should NOT go in recycling. "Compostable plastic" cups may go in municipal or commercial compost programs. These products are not designed to degrade in home compost bins or piles.

Starting on July 1, clear plastic egg cartons will be officially accepted.

Paper & Styrofoam egg cartons are not accepted in municipal recycling, but are often reused by backyard chicken farmers. Paper cartons may also be composted in municipal compost collections, or in home compost bins (for home composting, rip into pieces.)

For more information on what is and is not accepted for recycling in western Mass, please visit the Springfield MRF's website: (springfieldmrf.org) and Facebook page (facebook.com/SpringfieldMRF)

Falls Prevention Awareness Day September 22nd

The annual Falls Prevention Awareness Day (FPAD) will be observed on September 22, 2020 the first day of fall. The event seeks to raise awareness about how to prevent fall-related injuries among older adults.

Osteoporosis, Falls, and Broken Bones

Falls Prevention Awareness Day is a great time to learn about the link between fall-related injuries and osteoporosis. The good news is it is never too late to identify and treat osteoporosis or prevent falls to avoid broken bones. Speak to your healthcare provider about how to reduce your risks for osteoporosis and falls, about getting a bone density test, and about medications, if necessary, to treat osteoporosis.

How are falls and osteoporosis linked?

- ➤ 1 out of 5 falls among older adults causes serious injury such as a broken bone. If we can prevent falls, we can prevent broken bones of the hip, spine and wrist.
- ➤ Vitamin D deficiency is a risk factor for both falls and broken bones. Daily vitamin D and calcium supplements are associated with reduced falls and fewer broken bones in older adults. Speak with your health care provider about how much vitamin D and calcium is right for you.
- Regular physical activity and exercises that combine weight, muscle strengthening and balance helps reduce the risk of falls and improves the health of your bones.

Take action to prevent osteoporosis and falls

- ✓ Eat a balanced diet rich in calcium
- ✓ Take vitamin D supplements
- ✓ Get regular physical activity
- ✓ Don't smoke
- ✓ Limit your alcohol
- ✓ Check your home for safety
- ✓ Talk with your doctor about a screening test.
